

U.S. Railroad Retirement Board Plain Writing Act of 2010 Annual Compliance Report May 2018

Background

The Plain Writing Act, enacted in October 2010, requires agencies to communicate in a manner “that the public can understand and use,” and applies to any application, form, informational material, letter, or notice. It also defines plain writing as “clear, concise, well-organized, and follows other best practices appropriate to the subject or field or intended audience.”

The U.S. Railroad Retirement Board (RRB) has always tried to communicate with its customers and stakeholders in a clear, understandable manner. We have continued this effort with renewed emphasis in the context of the intent and requirements of the Plain Writing Act, with the goal of improving our ability to clearly communicate information about our benefits and services, and how to access them.

Implementation

The RRB has a page on its website – RRB.gov – dedicated to plain language, as required by the law, which is accessible by clicking on the Plain Writing @ RRB link at the bottom of the home page. The page includes information on guidelines and best practices in this area, as well as an e-mail address should a visitor to the page have any questions or concerns about agency documents. The agency also posts its most recent annual compliance reports on this page, with the RRB’s Public Affairs unit overseeing these activities.

Current Activities

In 2015, the RRB implemented its Learning Management System (LMS), which is part of an online training platform known as RRB University. The LMS helps the RRB manage and plan training activities, and includes a specific course on the tenets of the Plain Writing Act, along with several other in-person and online courses on the subject of written communication. In the past year, 20 employees completed the Plain Writing Act training. (The vast majority of agency employees previously completed this training in 2016, when first offered.) The agency hopes to see benefits from this training for many years to come, and plans to require refresher training on a periodic basis.

In terms of other training, 24 employees successfully completed an in-person training class on “Business Writing and Grammar.” In addition, 5 other agency employees completed other online courses related to business writing.

An ongoing activity at the RRB is the review of all written communications, including letters, publications, and online content, to make them clearer, following guidelines and best practices related to plain language and writing.
